School administrators attend academy session

Donald Caldwell, principal, and Frank Ladner, administrative assistant at Bay Senior High, were among 14 top educators from school districts on the Coast who attended a three-day tour and briefing last week at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

The group left Wednesday by Naval aircraft from the Air National Guard Training Site at Gulfport Municipal Airport for Jackson where they were joined by 19 other Mississippi administrators and counselors. They were accompanied by Capt. J.E. Thomas, director of the Gulf Coast Technical Institute, a retired U.S. Naval Reserve captain serving as coordinator of the Naval Academy Information Program; Cmdr. J.A. Ballan of the Jackson Naval Academy Information office, and Lt. Cmdr. Melvin S. Hemphill of the Cleveland, Ohio, office.

Captain Thomas said the Academy has instituted a new academic system under a civilian dean and has broadened the areas in which cadets can major such as foreign languages, etc., instead of engineering or other major Naval fields such as oceanography.

Warren Traub, Jr., is presently studying at the Naval Academy and Robert Hamilton, Jr., is a recent graduate. Both are Bay High grads.

announces for re-election to the office of Mississippi State Senator from the 34th Senatorial District, Composed of Hancock, Pearl River & Stone Counties

This is to announce my candidacy for re-election to the Mississippi State Senate from the 34th Senatorial District, composed of Hancock, Pearl River, and Stone counties. This is formerly the 43rd district, with Stone county being added by the Federal Courts.

I live on a million acre tract of Pinyans in Leake County, Mississippi. I am 37 years old and married to the former Linda Lee of Gosport Community in Pearl River County. We have four children Jim, 12; Raymond, 10; Dolly, 6; and Andy, 3. I attended the public schools of Hancock County, and Pearl River Jr. College. My family and I are active members of Union Baptist Church, Gosport. I hold membership in the FTA, American Legion, Farm Bureau, Rotary Club, Lions Club, and Kiwanis. I own and operate a 240 acre, 50 cow dairy farm.

I have enjoyed serving as your State Senator for the past four years. It has been a wonderful experience and opportunity in serving the good people from this district. I was able to change several tax commission ordinances that put me in a better position to serve the needs of this district. The commission ordinances that I now hold are as follows: child welfare, agriculture, county affairs, education, forestry, highways, mental health, and state library. As you know, all legislation is written and re-written in committee before final action by the full legislature. If re-elected to the Senate with the experience and four years seniority, I will be able to do even a better job. This will be the first time in history that you will have the opportunity to send a man back to the Senate for a consecutive term. The old tradition system for the Senate that we worked under since 1890 is out now.

I introduced several bills and helped perfect many that are now becoming law for the people of this district and the State of Mississippi. I will discuss my record and platform with you at my campaign program. I feel that I have served you well this four years and with my experience and knowledge of the needs and wishes of you the good people of Hancock, Pearl River and Stone Counties, I am asking for your vote and support in re-electing me to the Mississippi State Senate.

I was elected to the Mississippi Senate in 1958 by the largest majority vote that anyone had ever received from this district. This I am truly grateful for. I wish to thank each and every one of you for past and continued support. (P.S. Del. Adv.) 4-13-67

Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - Sen. William Fulbright and other members of the Foreign Relations Committee may have been protesting Johnson a big favor by refusing to pass the resolution LBJ requested for the Latin American Summit Conference in Uruguay this week.

The general attitude in Latin America is that the United States usually talks big about being a good neighbor but doesn't do much. Thus the statement as well as the people view with considerable cynicism our pronouncements of good intentions. They recall, for example, the rather superficial social gathering they had with President Eisenhower in Panama eleven years ago.

When the Senate committee refused to give Johnson the advance endorsement he had requested this time, it came as no great surprise to the Latin Americans because it was about par for U.S. policy.

But where it may have served Johnson well to that it has made him appear as one United States leader who genuinely seems to want to help in Latin American problems; he therefore will be classed as a friend who is doing his best despite difficult circumstances. And it may mean that he will be far more effective than otherwise would have been possible.

Actually, the president went to great lengths to get Senate approval of his program to aid Latin America. He consulted about 40 congressmen and senators in advance, though there was no requirement at all that he do this.

The obstreperous behavior of the Foreign Relations Committee was LBJ another plus—the support of one of his severest critics, Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon. Morse castigated his fellow senators as being "completely unfair. You kick the President when he doesn't consult you, and now when he does consult you, you kick him again."

The Punta del Este conference will accomplish no miracles. But it may achieve important first steps toward a Pan American common market, stabilization of commodity prices so vital to the economies of the South, a breaking down of the jealousies and nationalistic barriers to co-operation among South American nations particularly, as well as wider education and social progress.

If so, it will be a success—partly due to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's refusal to give President Johnson the advance support he requested.

Conservative president

One of the complaints of Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia against President Johnson has been that he is too liberal. At the recent Governors' Conference with the president at the White House, Maddox decided he is too conservative.

Maddox and the president got along very well in general—but they didn't talk about integration. Instead, they mostly discussed the more prosaic subject of highways.

Maddox wanted the president to release more funds for highway construction in Georgia, under the Federal Highway Program where Uncle Sam picks up 90 per cent of the tab. Since Johnson has frozen a lot of highway funds, this has cut back on the roadbuilding program.

Johnson explained to Maddox that government expenses are high, the war in Vietnam has forced a reduction in many federal spending programs, and that he has to keep a tight rein on many domestic projects.

Maddox was not entirely happy to find LBJ so conservative with money.

Paradise lost

Adam Clayton Powell's Bimini paradise is turning sour—so sour, in fact, that his closest friends and advisers are deeply concerned.

He's begun to feel isolated and persecuted, partly because the whole world doesn't seem to agree he's being mistreated. And he's taking it out on those supporters who do feel he's been given a raw deal.

"One minute he's pleasant and charming, the next minute he's cutting your guts out," according to one admirer who flew down to see him. "That's why they can't get anybody down there to see him except the odd-balls. And Adam even thinks some of them have come to spy on him."

It's so bad that the End-of-the-World Bar has lost some of its appeal, and his girl friend, Corinne Huff, is beginning to show signs of being less than happy.

However, Adam has been prevailed upon to give fewer press conferences and to tone down some of his comments. And he also has been persuaded to do something about his public image.

Usually Adam enjoys publicity about his flamboyance, including pictures featuring him with a bosomy fire dancer. He relishes the shocked outrage some of his utterances bring.

But now he is working—a little—at behaving himself. This is what started his series of weekly outdoor sermons on Sundays. The Bimini natives pay no attention to him, but curious tourists do attend. And Adam doesn't care why they come as long as he has an audience which news cameramen can photograph.

Yet his close friends say that unless something happens to get him away from his Bimini paradise, and his obsessions, the End-of-the-World Bar may be the end of the world for Adam Clayton Powell. He's teetering on the verge of a nervous collapse.

Vietnam face-saving

Before Secretary General U Thant departed on another peace mission to Asia, he had another urgent meeting with Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, reporting that he had received positive assurances from the communists that they would agree to truce talks if the bombing is halted. U Thant pleaded that an unconditional cessation in the bombing is absolutely necessary so that the North Vietnamese can go to the truce table without losing face. Meanwhile, captured enemy documents assert that the U.S. Army would need a million men to conquer and pacify both the Mekong Delta and the mountain area of Vietnam at the same time. This is more than double the number of troops we have in Vietnam today.

Significantly, the North Vietnamese estimate coincides almost exactly with what General Westmoreland has been telling the Pentagon and the president.

Incidentally, Gen. John McConnell, air force chief of staff, has complained privately that the United States has been dumping more bombs on North Vietnam than Hitler ruled on Britain during the height of World War II.

Yet all this bombing has merely leveled out a few barges, sampans, trucks, bridges and railroads. The same tonnage could have completely crippled North Vietnam by now, McConnell said, if the air force had been permitted to strike strategic targets.

March fires cost 4,751 acres

Low rainfall and high winds were cited as two contributing factors to the loss of 4,751 acres during March of this year, according to Guy W. Davis, Area Forester, Mississippi Forestry Commission.

Only 2.03 inches of rain fell in the county during that month, and the 173 fires were reported. These fires consumed the efforts of some 150 men from 15 counties.

"A Conservative View"

By Anna J. Kilpatrick

The returning vacationer who pines in Charleston may be looking for nothing more than a visit with old friends and a bowl of one-way city crabs. But in the old home of this incomparable city, he is likely to find a metaphor instead. It is a metaphor of profound meaning and he wishes the Congress would come find it, too.

Along among the cities of America, so far as this traveler is aware, Charleston is reaching herself from within. She is preserving the heart of her old values in housing, not because the structures are old, but because they are values. Yet the venture is much more than mere preservation. Charleston is adopting the past to the present; she is putting the conservative doctrine to its best and purest use.

Elsewhere in the country, one encounters a curious recurring urban ailment: The central cities are suffering from an explosion to the suburbs; they are experiencing the social and economic upheaval that accompanies mass immigration of low-income families; they are undergoing the drastic surgery of urban renewal, federal style; they are elaborating their architectural heritage in a desperate attempt to get gloriously modern; they are witnessing the destruction of old neighborhoods and old associations, and crying for the new-new-new relationships imposed.

In this not precisely what is happening to American institutions generally? The policy-making responsibilities that once were vested in the states and localities have disappeared and blown off to Washington. The traditional of church, family, community have greatly diminished. And the constitution, that metaphorical house of our fathers, has been unrecognizably modernized; it has yielded to the firm realm, picture window, and movable walls. The old restraints upon power have not been adequate to contemporary needs; they have been hatched flat and smashed over. Little remains of the grand design of American government. There is only a sign arising from the rubble: Your Federal Town or West.

Consider, if you please, the contrast of Charleston. Fifteen years ago, an outside observer would have given a nickel for her prospects. Here was an old seaport, off the main highway, a navy town, a monotonous Negro population, a tradition of general poverty. Many of the houses of the Battery were suffering from the ill-effects of old age.

Almost anyone would have predicted that the central city would fall into slums, followed by urban renewal, followed by a sterile mediocrity.

But Charleston simply would not succumb. Her people are in their sense of community, and in the houses of their fathers, come price-less and irreplaceable values. What if the buildings were old? They had round beams, solid bricks, graceful details, spacious rooms. They had charm and distinction and tradition. In the obscure word, they had character.

So Charleston adapted. The Atlantic Coast Railway took a magnificent old house on King Street and made it into a ticket agency and office building. The City Water Works moved its operations into an octagonal house on George Street, dating from 1796. The Salvation Army found it could adapt a declining mansion in Raggedborough. Florist Joe Trott converted a residence at Queen and State Streets. The Citizens & Southern Bank renovated a picturesque building on Queen Street and made it a modern "counting house." On a narrow lane known as Vendue Range, the John Hancock and Prudential Insurance companies brought aging buildings back to life. Waterfront warehouses have turned into modern apartments and offices. Lawyers, brokers, realtors, contractors, grocers, ship factors and chandeliers—all of them have found that old values are worth preserving.

There is not a lovelier city in America today than Charleston in spring time. The whole is much more than the sum of the parts—the tiny gardens, the viarials, the Spanish Moss, the cobblestone alleys, the brick walks, the courtyards and archways. Charleston is even more essentially a city of human beings who live on a human scale, in mutual respect between the races. Here the old values of family, church, neighborhood, and community are the values that count.

Flying back to Washington, one falls into reverie. This nation once cherished such a neighborhood of values: a sense of citizenship, planned in cyprus; a constitution, high-collared, coldly walked; a garden of personal freedom—the freedom to work the freedom to harvest, the right of privacy. What has the bulldozer brought us, one-half so precious as what Charleston has preserved?

Social Security benefits told

Phillip E. Dugan, Kansas City Field Representative, Social Security Administration, is to go to the county to answer questions and take applications for Social Security benefits from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. every other Thursday in the Agricultural Bldg., Nocatee Ave.

Remembering to work Dugan has discovered that many of the questions asked are of a general nature and they, and his answers, could help several people.

Q. How long, E. Dugan? I applied for Social Security checks in January of last year because I thought I would earn a lot of money.

A. From P. J. Cloninger, Market: I did not get an annual report from this year as I did last year. Why to that?

A. Probably because you told us not to pay any benefits last year because you were coming to such money. This year we aren't automatically coming out money again. If we did, you would be getting a lot of money.

Q. From P. J. Cloninger, Market: I did not get an annual report from this year as I did last year. Why to that?

money, but I earned less than I thought I would. How can I get my checks for last year?

A. You must fill an annual report with an giving total earnings and the months you did work or as work. If there are any such months. The report is available at any Social Security office.

this year rather than the regular time of April 15 because the 15th falls on a weekend.

Q. From E.S. Bay St. Louis: I earned $5,000 last year as I didn't collect any Social Security checks. However I didn't work at all during the summer. How can I collect for the summer months?

A. Fill an annual report available at any Social Security office. Show on the report the months you didn't work or work of very little so checks will probably be due for those periods.

Legion of Merit goes to Engineer

The top engineer for the Army Corps of Engineers at NASA's Mississippi Test Facility was presented one of the nation's highest peacetime awards as the $400-million space booster was completed March 11.

Lt. Col. Roy P. Beatty, area engineer for the Mobile Engineer District, was awarded the Legion of Merit for outstanding performance of duty in directing construction of test stands and support facilities for Saturn V moon rocket stages.

The citation cited his service during the past August, 1964, to February, 1967, in supervision of construction of ground test facilities for the lot and test cycle business for the National Aeronautics and Space

Administration Apollo Space Program at Mississippi Test Facility. Colonel Beatty supervised construction amounting to over $150 million at complex facilities. The type facilities with exotic engineering requirements, NASA directed construction, unique construction and supply problems, coordination responsibilities with local NASA officials, contractors and various elements of the Mobile Engineer District are indicative of the many challenges and complicated construction which Colonel Beatty so masterfully coordinated and completed.

"His exceptional ability to grasp the scope of the problem, quickly analyze and provide logical and firm recommendations to the contracting offices were of immeasurable value in resolving claims, contract actions and construction problems involving 59 different contractors on 63 separate contracts with 1,057 modifications. Colonel Beatty's dynamic leadership, untiring devotion to duty, and professional competence have earned him the well deserved respect of NASA officials, the construction industry and all Corps of Engineers employees with whom he associated."

A native of Mexico, Mo., he was graduated from the Military Academy at West Point and holds a master's degree in civil engineering from the University of Iowa. He and his family reside in Piquette.

ENGINEER CITED—Lt. Col. Roy P. Beatty, area engineer for Army Corps of Engineers at Mississippi Test Facility, since Aug. 1964, receives Legion of Merit for part in directing construction of space test complex from Maj. Gen. F. J. Clark, deputy chief of Corps of Engineers. He has been alerted for reassignment and expects to leave this month for Panama Canal Zone.

Rotary hears state governor aspirant

Businessmen, professional men, store owners and all leaders were told "you cannot afford to not get into politics" by William Waller, candidate for Governor of Mississippi. This occurred at last Wednesday's Rotary luncheon.

The candidate's general theme in a short talk, was that Mississippians should think and act in a more aggressive, positive manner and not by negative reaction. In this connection, he stated Mississippi was "people poor" and pointed to the high number of high school and college graduates leaving the state each year.

This, he suggested, is because there is no confidence in Mississippi...no confidence in political leadership...no confidence our economic growth will catch up. Specific proposals advanced by the aspirant were 1) cabinet level public information agency, 2) have the state receive interest in idle state funds, 3) capital investment in tourist and travel industry, including immediate construction on the Gulf Coast of a convention center housing as many as 10,000 people, 4) immediate up-grading of education and improved highway system, and 5) a constitutional amendment providing for 60 day annual sessions of the legislature.

Oystermen granted extension

Oysters dredging on Square Hound Sound and St. Joe Sound will continue through April 30, it was decided at a meeting of the Mississippi Marine Conservation Commission Monday at Biloxi.

The commission, one of the best in recent years, was closed on March 28 for the oystermen's objection to Monday's meeting. Oystermen dredging to commence again on April 12.

Some oyster dealers said they plan to freeze these oysters for future sales, chairman Charles Weems said. The commission was also recommended by marine biologist William J. Demaree, Chief Inspector George Williams said there are only a few boats at work in these areas and they are getting good oysters.

The commission plans to meet at Biloxi tonight with the Mississippi Game and Fish Commission and Chief Williams said one of the topics will be the controversial offshore water fishing boundary of jurisdiction.

It isn't easy to buy bean coffee!

Nowadays, very few stores offer you bean coffee.

Why does A&P still offer coffees in the bean?

Basically, because "We Care."

Specifically, because we know these facts:

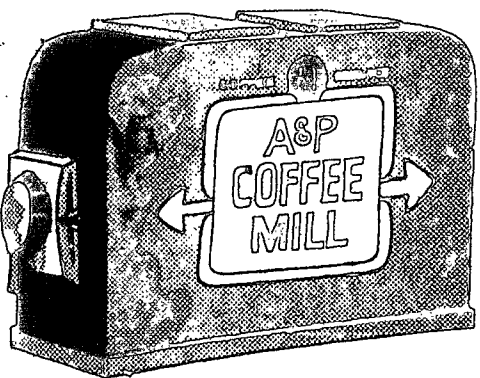

The coffee bean is nature's seal that holds the flavor.

Once that seal is broken by grinding, flavor fades...

NO MATTER HOW IT'S PACKAGED.

The shorter the time between grinding the beans and brewing your coffee, the greater the flavor.

If you want the finest cup of "The Think Drink" you've ever tasted, buy and brew one of A&P's three Bean Coffee blends...

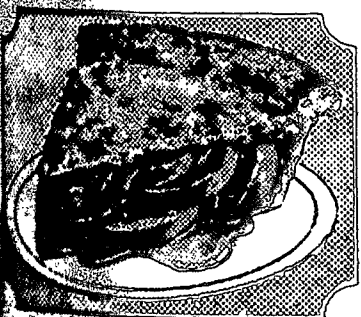

Eight O'Clock, Red Circle or Bokar.

Not every store can offer you custom-ground bean coffee.

A&P can and does.

Shouldn't A&P be your store?

O'Toole's Driving Machine... There was a teenage dance Saturday night, April 1st, at St. John's Parish Hall in Lake Shore. Popular go-go music was played by a local group of really good musicians who call themselves "The Agents". All ages and everyone had a good time. The hall is open every Saturday night with dancing to the late and early disco music. Everyone signs in and pays a small fee to leave. The really wonderful of Nov. James to this for the kids and I give you parents who appreciate it.
